SHEEP SCAB

Have you got all the facts you need to protect your flock?

Sheep scab, caused by infestation of the skin with the scab mite costs the UK sheep industry >£80M per year.

Mites resistant to the ML injectables have been found in Scotland so correct diagnosis is crucial to give the correct treatment, at the right time and to all animals not just those showing signs

Sheep scab mite

What are signs of sheep scab?

- Scab is characterised by yellow scabs, restlessness, scratching, loss of wool and loss of condition

How is it spread?

- Scab is spread by direct contact with infested animals, but as the mite can live off-host for 16-19 days, scab can be spread via fence posts, handling equipment, trailers and shearing equipment

If you suspect your flock has scab, you must report it to APHA and should seek advice from your vet on controls.

Treatments

- A blood test is available for sheep scab and can diagnose the disease before clinical signs appear, reducing the spread
- OP dipping is an effective means of controlling scab and also kills mites resistant to the MLs but must only be used as a plunge dip

Never allow dip to enter a watercourse and ensure you have a permit from SEPA prior to disposal of waste dip to land.
